SEX WORK IS WORK: SEX WORKERS CALL FOR DECRIMINALISATION!

The Impact of Criminalisation on Sex Workers’ Vulnerability to HIV and Violence

Criminalisation increases sex workers’ vulnerability to violence and HIV, severely inhibiting the health and wellbeing of sex workers globally. In many countries, possessing condoms is enough to warrant an arrest for ‘prostitution’. That makes sex workers afraid to have them on them, as well as targeting outreach workers who distribute condoms.

SURVEILLANCE, POLICING AND INCREASE VULNERABILITY TO HIV

Police are among the main perpetrators of sexual, physical and emotional violence against sex workers. Law enforcers often extort money, information and sex in exchange for sex workers avoiding arrest. Police are among the main perpetrators of sexual, physical and emotional violence against sex workers. Law enforcers often extort money, information and sex in exchange for sex workers avoiding arrest.

SEX WORK IS WORK: SEX WORKERS CALL FOR DECRIMINALISATION!

THE IMPACT OF CRIMINALISATION ON SEX WORKERS’ VULNERABILITY TO HIV AND VIOLENCE

The Impact of Criminalisation on Sex Workers’ Vulnerability to HIV and Violence

Criminalisation increases sex workers’ vulnerability to violence and HIV, severely inhibiting the health and wellbeing of sex workers globally. In many countries, possessing condoms is enough to warrant an arrest for ‘prostitution’. That makes sex workers afraid to have them on them, as well as targeting outreach workers who distribute condoms.

SURVEILLANCE, POLICING AND INCREASE VULNERABILITY TO HIV

Police are among the main perpetrators of sexual, physical and emotional violence against sex workers. Law enforcers often extort money, information and sex in exchange for sex workers avoiding arrest. Police are among the main perpetrators of sexual, physical and emotional violence against sex workers. Law enforcers often extort money, information and sex in exchange for sex workers avoiding arrest.

SEX WORK IS WORK: SEX WORKERS CALL FOR DECRIMINALISATION!

THE IMPACT OF CRIMINALISATION ON SEX WORKERS’ VULNERABILITY TO HIV AND VIOLENCE

Criminalisation increases sex workers’ vulnerability to violence and HIV, severely inhibiting the health and wellbeing of sex workers globally. In many countries, possessing condoms is enough to warrant an arrest for ‘prostitution’. That makes sex workers afraid to have them on them, as well as targeting outreach workers who distribute condoms.

SURVEILLANCE, POLICING AND INCREASE VULNERABILITY TO HIV

Police are among the main perpetrators of sexual, physical and emotional violence against sex workers. Law enforcers often extort money, information and sex in exchange for sex workers avoiding arrest. Police are among the main perpetrators of sexual, physical and emotional violence against sex workers. Law enforcers often extort money, information and sex in exchange for sex workers avoiding arrest.

SEX WORK IS WORK: SEX WORKERS CALL FOR DECRIMINALISATION!

THE IMPACT OF CRIMINALISATION ON SEX WORKERS’ VULNERABILITY TO HIV AND VIOLENCE

Criminalisation increases sex workers’ vulnerability to violence and HIV, severely inhibiting the health and wellbeing of sex workers globally. In many countries, possessing condoms is enough to warrant an arrest for ‘prostitution’. That makes sex workers afraid to have them on them, as well as targeting outreach workers who distribute condoms.

SURVEILLANCE, POLICING AND INCREASE VULNERABILITY TO HIV

Police are among the main perpetrators of sexual, physical and emotional violence against sex workers. Law enforcers often extort money, information and sex in exchange for sex workers avoiding arrest. Police are among the main perpetrators of sexual, physical and emotional violence against sex workers. Law enforcers often extort money, information and sex in exchange for sex workers avoiding arrest.

SEX WORK IS WORK: SEX WORKERS CALL FOR DECRIMINALISATION!

THE IMPACT OF CRIMINALISATION ON SEX WORKERS’ VULNERABILITY TO HIV AND VIOLENCE

Criminalisation increases sex workers’ vulnerability to violence and HIV, severely inhibiting the health and wellbeing of sex workers globally. In many countries, possessing condoms is enough to warrant an arrest for ‘prostitution’. That makes sex workers afraid to have them on them, as well as targeting outreach workers who distribute condoms.

SURVEILLANCE, POLICING AND INCREASE VULNERABILITY TO HIV

Police are among the main perpetrators of sexual, physical and emotional violence against sex workers. Law enforcers often extort money, information and sex in exchange for sex workers avoiding arrest. Police are among the main perpetrators of sexual, physical and emotional violence against sex workers. Law enforcers often extort money, information and sex in exchange for sex workers avoiding arrest.

SEX WORK IS WORK: SEX WORKERS CALL FOR DECRIMINALISATION!

THE IMPACT OF CRIMINALISATION ON SEX WORKERS’ VULNERABILITY TO HIV AND VIOLENCE

Criminalisation increases sex workers’ vulnerability to violence and HIV, severely inhibiting the health and wellbeing of sex workers globally. In many countries, possessing condoms is enough to warrant an arrest for ‘prostitution’. That makes sex workers afraid to have them on them, as well as targeting outreach workers who distribute condoms.

SURVEILLANCE, POLICING AND INCREASE VULNERABILITY TO HIV

Police are among the main perpetrators of sexual, physical and emotional violence against sex workers. Law enforcers often extort money, information and sex in exchange for sex workers avoiding arrest. Police are among the main perpetrators of sexual, physical and emotional violence against sex workers. Law enforcers often extort money, information and sex in exchange for sex workers avoiding arrest.

SEX WORK IS WORK: SEX WORKERS CALL FOR DECRIMINALISATION!

THE IMPACT OF CRIMINALISATION ON SEX WORKERS’ VULNERABILITY TO HIV AND VIOLENCE

Criminalisation increases sex workers’ vulnerability to violence and HIV, severely inhibiting the health and wellbeing of sex workers globally. In many countries, possessing condoms is enough to warrant an arrest for ‘prostitution’. That makes sex workers afraid to have them on them, as well as targeting outreach workers who distribute condoms.

SURVEILLANCE, POLICING AND INCREASE VULNERABILITY TO HIV

Police are among the main perpetrators of sexual, physical and emotional violence against sex workers. Law enforcers often extort money, information and sex in exchange for sex workers avoiding arrest. Police are among the main perpetrators of sexual, physical and emotional violence against sex workers. Law enforcers often extort money, information and sex in exchange for sex workers avoiding arrest.

SEX WORK IS WORK: SEX WORKERS CALL FOR DECRIMINALISATION!

THE IMPACT OF CRIMINALISATION ON SEX WORKERS’ VULNERABILITY TO HIV AND VIOLENCE

Criminalisation increases sex workers’ vulnerability to violence and HIV, severely inhibiting the health and wellbeing of sex workers globally. In many countries, possessing condoms is enough to warrant an arrest for ‘prostitution’. That makes sex workers afraid to have them on them, as well as targeting outreach workers who distribute condoms.

SURVEILLANCE, POLICING AND INCREASE VULNERABILITY TO HIV

Police are among the main perpetrators of sexual, physical and emotional violence against sex workers. Law enforcers often extort money, information and sex in exchange for sex workers avoiding arrest. Police are among the main perpetrators of sexual, physical and emotional violence against sex workers. Law enforcers often extort money, information and sex in exchange for sex workers avoiding arrest.

SEX WORK IS WORK: SEX WORKERS CALL FOR DECRIMINALISATION!

THE IMPACT OF CRIMINALISATION ON SEX WORKERS’ VULNERABILITY TO HIV AND VIOLENCE

Criminalisation increases sex workers’ vulnerability to violence and HIV, severely inhibiting the health and wellbeing of sex workers globally. In many countries, possessing condoms is enough to warrant an arrest for ‘prostitution’. That makes sex workers afraid to have them on them, as well as targeting outreach workers who distribute condoms.

SURVEILLANCE, POLICING AND INCREASE VULNERABILITY TO HIV

Police are among the main perpetrators of sexual, physical and emotional violence against sex workers. Law enforcers often extort money, information and sex in exchange for sex workers avoiding arrest. Police are among the main perpetrators of sexual, physical and emotional violence against sex workers. Law enforcers often extort money, information and sex in exchange for sex workers avoiding arrest.

SEX WORK IS WORK: SEX WORKERS CALL FOR DECRIMINALISATION!

THE IMPACT OF CRIMINALISATION ON SEX WORKERS’ VULNERABILITY TO HIV AND VIOLENCE

Criminalisation increases sex workers’ vulnerability to violence and HIV, severely inhibiting the health and wellbeing of sex workers globally. In many countries, possessing condoms is enough to warrant an arrest for ‘prostitution’. That makes sex workers afraid to have them on them, as well as targeting outreach workers who distribute condoms.

SURVEILLANCE, POLICING AND INCREASE VULNERABILITY TO HIV

Police are among the main perpetrators of sexual, physical and emotional violence against sex workers. Law enforcers often extort money, information and sex in exchange for sex workers avoiding arrest. Police are among the main perpetrators of sexual, physical and emotional violence against sex workers. Law enforcers often extort money, information and sex in exchange for sex workers avoiding arrest.